

Interview 1: Itisha

Unknown 0:01

Hi. For this interview, could I get your consent?

Unknown 0:05

Yes, you have my consent.

Unknown 0:07

Okay. So I have a few questions regarding your experience around UQ and just general life. So can you tell us an interesting fact that you discovered about the campus?

Unknown 0:19

I don't think. Wait, an interesting fact I discovered last semester during my design design thinking one of the assignments that the the Fogon Smith building is a very historic building, and during some like I don't exactly remember, but during some like World War, I don't know if it's the first one or the second one. It was a military base here in the Fogon Smith building, and the lawn was used as all.

Unknown 0:55

Oh, how did you find that all?

Unknown 0:57

I was doing research about Great Court, and that's what one of the interviewee told me about that this is a historic place, and it should not be tampered with.

Unknown 1:10

Okay, and do you know how he or she got to know about that particular fact?

Unknown 1:14

I would say probably like maybe doing some research or his friends as well.

Unknown 1:20

Oh, okay. So tell me about a time when you visited a new place. So, what are the kinds of things that you're more excited to learn about that place?

Unknown 1:32

For me, I'm most excited about the architecture, the area, how like how big it is, and the architecture. If the buildings are like more gothic or like more industrial, more I don't know how to describe it. It's it's it creates a vibe for the next time I'm being there. Okay, like the whole time I'm gonna be there. It's it's just like it sets the mood for me.

Unknown 2:03

So, are you also interested in the history of the architecture?

Unknown 2:06

Not particularly, but it's always a plus point to know about the history, and if there's gonna be a development or something, the history is really important to know, so that we don't destroy a really important piece of past.

Unknown 2:23

Okay, so what I understood is you like the visual part of the architecture, how it looks and all of that. Okay, okay, interesting. Could you also describe a learning experience where you felt engaged and connected with the material?

Unknown 2:38

I would have to go back again to the design thinking project because it was the time when I got like we had to think about the Campbell Place. It was the final assignment, and we had to think about the Campbell Place and came up for a design opportunity there. And our team came up with a solar panel seated area.

Unknown 3:00

Okay.

Unknown 3:01

So it was interesting, and it it was kind of connecting in some way to the Campbell Place. And it for me, it will always be something now. Whenever I go to that place, it it like I go back in time and like, okay, this is how we imagine things here, and it could be like it's the project which connects me to that Campbell place.

Unknown 3:27

Okay, so could you name what specific things made this course in like for you to find it meaningful?

Unknown 3:36

Um, I really

Unknown 3:39

like what aspects. Okay,

Unknown 3:40

Okay, so the aspect about this course, that course, which made me really interested in it, is like, as the design suggest, the name suggests, the course design thinking. But so far, we have been learning that design is something which we do, like, on a computer electronically, and we don't really discuss about the physical aspects aspects in real real life and design thinking around that. That course was particularly focused in like real life situation, like real life things, and designing around like those things instead of like working electronically.

Unknown 4:22

Okay, interesting. Okay, can you also tell me about the last time you talked to someone back home about uni, and what did you end up telling them about?

Unknown 4:32

I talked to my mom every day, so I would say like last night, and I was telling her about like the bunch of assignments I have. It's like every day I have an assignment, or maybe I would say like in the morning I was talking to my father as well, and I was telling him that I was talking to this friend, and she was asked me what I'm doing, and I'm always doing an assignment when she calls me, and she's like, "How many assignment do you have? And I like have one every week.

Unknown 5:04

Oh damn! Okay, okay. Have you ever visited any of the indigenous architecture in UQ? What was it, and how do you think of that place?

Unknown 5:14

I don't think so. I've visited any indigenous indigenous architecture, but I think there's a museum, like for that particular like indigenous people which represents them, but I've never been there to be honest. So I can't say much about it.

Unknown 5:34

Okay, no worries. What was the first place on campus I started to feel like the campus was truly yours, and how did that happen?

Unknown 5:43

I really like when I need to lock in for my studies or anything, and when I can't study at home, I go to the central library level four. There are cabins there. I turn off the lights and sit there with my laptop, my earphones in, and I just walk. There's no disturbance there, so I love that area. If you had to pick one specific spot or a hidden historical corner on campus that feels most meaningful to you, what happened there to make it special, and what does it tell you about the kind of community UQ has been over time.

Unknown 6:06

Unknown 6:25

Okay, the first time when I came to campus, I really remember I went past these lakes and I clicked a picture for like of this campus as in like the first picture, and it's something. I was so like I feel like I was so childish and I didn't know where to go. I ended up asking few people who also didn't know where I need to go, and they just directed me in a direction that okay there are a bunch of engineering buildings so you might need to go in some like one of these buildings, and I came here and I was completely lost like a puppy, and I like literally I went around the great court like three times to just to find my building. So that area and the UK likes is like really connected and. What what was the second last part of the question?

Unknown 7:27

That do does those places tell you anything about the community in UQ or anything about UQ?
The

Unknown 7:34

places don't necessarily tell much about the community, or maybe the UQ Lake area could say like it's a very welcoming place.

Unknown 7:44

Okay,

Unknown 7:45

like I always see bunch of people sitting there or just like laying on the grass, watching the like ducks or the birds in the lake, and they are with the family, the child, childrens and stuff.

Unknown 7:58

Okay,

Unknown 7:59

so that's really interesting.

Unknown 8:00

Just a last question: What makes you feel like you belong to a place? What, what kind of information, or what kind of feelings, or what, what do you search for to feel that sense of belongingness?

Unknown 8:16

Like apart from studies here, I've not been really being a part here in much of the activities recently, because I'm like working as well, so I don't get much time to be on campus when I'm not studying. So, it's I would say it it's probably like the the communication with tutors, professor, and my friends, my classmates, and stuff. It's something which I look up to. Okay, just another question. So sorry. So, if you had free time on campus, how would you spend that time?

Unknown 8:50

Unknown 8:58

I would like to first, like, whenever I have time, I just get my earphones in and listen to music and go around the campus. Just the walk too, because like it's really beautiful campus. There's a lot of trees, a lot of green tree. I love it.

Unknown 9:16

So I usually if I if I also like need to go home. I would end up taking the long way just to see the campus. Okay, and is there anything more you want to discover about the campus? Anything? I mean, I would really like to try all of the cafes. I haven't tried like all of them yet.

Unknown 9:39

Okay,

Unknown 9:40

it's been a year here, but like I haven't tried a lot of cafes here.

Unknown 9:45

Awesome! Thank you so much

Unknown 9:46

for your time.
